THE collection of American Pottery has been assembled under the sponsorship of The American Federation of Arts. It was exhibited first at the Society of Arts and Crafts, Boston, this being its second showing. A jury from the Boston Society of Arts and Crafts assembled the collection.

The collection includes delightful pottery figurines, busts, birds and animals both for use and for ornament; vases of practical shape some of which look as though they had been designed especially for the display of flowers while others are purely decorative objects. There are bowls, plates, jars, tiles and garden pottery, interesting and colorful.

The collection will be shown in various cities throughout the United States at the close of this exhibition.

Through the kindness of Mr. Frank Canaday of the United States Advertising Corporation, a collection of pottery has been added for exhibition in Toledo. This ceramic ware, called Celebron, has been developed by Mr. W. Scott Long of the Albright China Company, Carrolton, Ohio, in answer to a demand for an American product equivalent to imported wares of high standing. It is distinguished by a new base of selected native clays blended to produce a natural, rich, mellow tone, unaided by artificial stains and coloring—therefore uniform and lasting, and by a silkiness of finish communicated to the glaze by the fine texture of the underlying base. The examples here displayed show the natural color of the base under transparent glaze and suggest the extensive possibilities of color combination in overglaze and underglaze design.

The exhibition of printed fabrics by Ruth Reeves is the outgrowth of the recent international exhibition of contemporary tapestries held in this Museum. In these hangings one of America's foremost textile designers has created patterns for decorative fabrics widely produced by the firm of W. & J. Sloane, Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Through this co-operation fine design becomes accessible to every home, a vision and achievement which will have wide influence in the field of contemporary decoration. Familiar materials are elevated to new richness, designs are created expressly for the needs of contemporary apartments whose windows must be veiled from nearby walls and neighbors. There are fabrics for bedrooms and living rooms and also designs related to radio rooms, game rooms, hunting lodges and kitchens. The decorative possibilities of cotton, inexpensive in cheesecloth, voile, marquisette, velour, astonish by their variety and charm. Patterns in velour for draperies are repeated in glass curtains.

These designs remain broadly decorative, either abstract or realistic in presentation, sometimes romantic in subject. Velvet, crepe, monk's cloth, voile, muslin, aeroplane cloth, turkish toweling arouse interest by the unusual beauty given them by color and design exactly adapted to their texture and weave.
